

casting of Angeles from his cabinet has significance. It is an act on the part of Carranza that shows his weakness, they say, and is merely spite-work to antagonize Villa.

Race For Mexico City.

Villa's advance on Mexico City has filled local Carranzistas with dismay, they say. Villa's friends say that even should the entire rebel organization accept him as its leader without opposition, he would be greatly disappointed. He expects opposition, and is prepared to meet it.

Carranza men say that General Obregon, who is moving from Guaymas toward Guadalajara, is not planning to join Villa's army, but is acting under orders from Carranza to reach Mexico City in advance of the Villa forces, and deprive Villa of the fruits of his victory by capturing the city before he gets there. They also say that General Gonzalez, who has an army of 25,000 men, is moving from Monterey for the same purpose, and that he will co-operate with Obregon.

Villa, according to dispatches from Juarez today, is undisturbed by yesterday's developments, and Angeles, who is accompanying Villa's army on its onward march, apparently is not lamenting the loss of his cabinet position. Supporters of Villa today declared that as Carranza has no cabinet, and consequently is powerless to make and unmake cabinet ministers, except on paper, Carranza may maintain the semblance of a civil government until he is able to open the attack on Zacatecas. The bad condition of the railroad below Torreon interfered somewhat with the troop movement, but repairs were rushed, and reports received today indicate that practically the whole army will engage in the assault.

Send Villa Congratulations.

A message has been sent to Villa by his admirers here, congratulating him on the double action of breaking with Carranza and announcing Angeles as his chief.

The message was: "With true and sincere enthusiasm as coreligionists we have the honor to congratulate you. It was already time that you should save the revolution from the peridy of Carranza and his coterie. These men have had no idea except to favor Carranza for the ruinous purpose of eliminating the Maderista element, which is the one that constitutes the constitutional party, and is animated by the reform ideas necessary to the nation. We salute you affectionately, and offer our services with all loyalty."

Villa's reply, received today, was: "I received your telegram of this date and I tender to you my appreciative thanks. Permit me to manifest to you that now is the time that our beloved country needs the help of good Mexicans, and if you are disposed to that end I shall be glad to have you co-operate with me to obtain the triumph of our cause and to fight as I am doing for my country and not for personalities."

Signs As General-in-Chief.

The telegram is signed "Villa, General in Chief," for the first time. He had been signing "Chief of the Division of the North."

Manuel Castillo Brito, one of the signers of the telegram to Villa, was governor of Campeche when Madero was overthrown. He left Mexico several months later and has been connected with the revolution since. Serrano and Delvaldo, of El Correo del Bravo, who also signed it, were deported from Chihuahua by the Carranza military.

Motorcycle 'Riled' Mule—Man Hurt

Never ride a motorcycle too close to the rear of a mule. No matter how docile and inoffensive looking the "critter" appears, don't do it.

This is the advice of Jesse White, of 206 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, who had the sad necessity of choosing between passing the aft section of Maud, a mule ridden by Sgt. Sill Jeffries, of the Washington Barracks, at the psychological moment or arriving just within proper striking distance of the animal's rear understanding at an inopportune time.

White declares he did neither. He says the innocent looking Maud just played "possum" until he arrived within reach of her hoofs and then let go. Miss Mule evidently took exception to the chug of the motorcycle engine.

White was thrown to the ground. The motorcycle was injured about the legs and the machine was damaged to the extent of $15.

The accident (or premeditated assault) occurred at Fourth and M streets southeast.

Authorities here have been editing a Spanish paper here in support of Carranza, governor of Sonora, to whom Carranza is opposed, but whom Villa is supporting.

Carranza's sympathizers in El Paso assert that Carranza ordered General Angeles to take temporary command of Villa's artillery and go to General Nater's relief at Zacatecas. Unwilling to go south without Villa, Angeles refused. Carranza repeated the order. Then Villa sent in his resignation, which Carranza refused.

Carranza men here say Villa was honest in his intentions and had actually begun packing his baggage to return to Chihuahua, when Carranza accepted the resignation and called for a council of Villa's generals to elect a successor. It is said that General Angeles, Emilio Madero, and Raoul Madero set on foot a plan to eliminate Carranza and put Angeles in his place.

They persuaded the other generals of Villa's army to join them and sent a round robin to Carranza saying they would serve under no other than Villa. Thereupon Villa was asked to make himself general-in-chief and cut loose from Carranza.

GREET FLAG AT NIGHT O'ER FORT McHENRY

Newspaper Men Are Guests of Baltimore Press Club on Trip Down Bay.

For the first time in nearly a century, the Star-Spangled Banner floated after sundown last night over the ramparts of Fort McHenry, in Chesapeake bay, just as it did before dawn on that memorable morning in September, 1814, when Francis Scott Key was inspired to write this greatest of all historic anthems.

Stirred by a brisk westerly breeze, this flag fluttered from the Fort McHenry staff in the broad rays of a powerful searchlight, while 500 newspaper men, correspondents and news writers from Washington and other Eastern cities, stood at attention, uncovered in salute.

The newspaper men were the guests of the Baltimore Press Club, and the flag was raised for their benefit. It was made by the school teachers of Baltimore, and up to last night hung in the streets of the city. It is a replica in silk of the banner that Key saw "By the dawn's early light," as he peered over the bulwark of a British warship, in the harbor. The flag and the staff will feature "The Star-Spangled Banner" centennial to be celebrated in Baltimore next September.

300 From Washington.

The Washington newspaper men, nearly 300 strong, were taken to Baltimore last night in a special train over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

Every possible convenience for their comfort was provided by the five big steel coaches, one of which was a club car. Upon their arrival they were greeted by a Baltimore committee and Mayor Preston, who welcomed them to the city. From Camden Station the party was taken in autos to pier 16 of the Towchester Beach line, and there embarked for a trip down the bay.

As the vessel approached Fort McHenry the engines were stopped, and as the searchlight played upon the flag, the band broke into the strains of the "Star-Spangled Banner." Sheriff Tom McNulty, of Baltimore, sang the words as written by Key, in a voice that spread and rolled across the bay, and the entire party stood at attention. The scene was stirring and impressive.

Many forms of entertainment were provided on the boat. The pick of Baltimore boxing talent staged several boxing matches that were topped off with a little royal by four colored citizens. This was one of the hits of the evening.

Buffet supper is Maryland was served throughout the trip, and those fortunate enough to be aboard the Annapolis were loud in their praise of Maryland hospitality.

Senators Are Guests.

After a cruise down the bay, the party made the return by automobile and special train, reaching Washington this morning. Senators John Sharp Williams and Martine of New Jersey and other Government officials were among the invited guests, and they aided in the general merriment. Speeches were taboos, with the exception of a brief address by Mayor Preston of Baltimore explaining the nature of the

Big Day's Work for Sun Tomorrow

Old Sol, the well-known luminary, will have his hardest day's work in the year tomorrow, for he is due to beam on Washington for fourteen hours and forty-eight minutes, which is about two minutes more beaming than he will be called on to do any other day in 1914.

At 4:42 a. m. he will rise from somewhere beyond Maryland, but about two hours before that time, 1:57 to be exact, he will have touched the Tropic of Cancer and by the time his first rays hit the Capitol dome he will already be on his way back south. Sunset will occur here at 7:30 p. m. It will be just about noon in India when the northernmost point in the sun's apparent course is reached, and in that country the sun will hang directly over the Tropic of Cancer for a few moments.

Both in 1914 and in 1915, June 22 will be the longest day of the year, but in 1916, leap year, the extra day in February will move the calendar along a notch so that the longest day will fall on June 21. It will be a year and six hours, lacking a few seconds, from 1:57 tomorrow morning before the earth and sun are in the same relative position, which will be at 7:30 a. m., June 23, 1916. The next instance will be 1:57 p. m., June 21, 1918.

In addition to being a trying day for the sun, tomorrow will be a hard-sun for the man who limits himself to one cigar a day or two drinks a day, or sets a similar boundary to his desire. This old-fashioned man who works from sun to sun will accomplish a lot and his suffragette sister will have plenty of daylight for chasing the King. A perusal of the old style almanac shows that those who go out bareheaded tomorrow probably will get freckled and surf bathers will do well to use plenty of witch hazel after spending most of the day in the water.

Star-Spangled Banner centennial celebration and its purpose.

For nearly a century the flag over the ramparts of Fort McHenry has been lowered at sundown. During all of the time that it was a garrisoned fort this rule was followed. In recent years the flag has flown only on holidays and special occasions.

The raising of the banner last night was arranged as a feature of the entertainment of the scribes who came from nearly all of the big Eastern cities.

COMMITTEE OF 100 TO GET JULY 4 FUND

Balance of $1,000 Needed for Celebration Can Be Raised in Day, Says Newman.

To raise a necessary $1,000 for the community celebration of the Fourth of July, Commissioner Newman will appoint a committee of 100 tomorrow, each to raise $10. With the safe and sane idea, it is expected that the needed sum will be raised in a day and the plans for the celebration matured at once.

The program is a varied one and is open to all. There are the usual field day events, in which the amateur athletes of the city will take part, particular events, mostly mounted, which are provided for the soldiers, including mounted tug of war, military drills and tournaments, where rings will be run for with glistering sabers at a charge.

There will also be a complete series of aquatic events for the swimmers of the city, including races over different distances, under-water swimming and diving, plain and fancy. The colored children are not left out, for special events for them will be staged at the same hour as the others on the campus of Howard University.

Beginning at 2:30 a. m., the various events will start on the Monument Grounds and at the Potomac Park swimming pools. This feature is under the direction of the committee headed by C. Edward Beckett. The events are open to all amateurs in the District, and entry blanks may be procured at Spalding's, 813 Fourteenth street, or from the clerk at the municipal bathing beach.

Gold, silver, and bronze medals will be given the winners of the various events, for which a large number of entries are expected. The principal field events will be as follows: 100-yard dash, novice; 100-yard dash, open; 440-yard run; 880-yard dash, one mile run; running high jump; running broad jump; putting 12-pound shot; relay races.

The swimming events will be held at 11 a. m. They will consist of 100-yard swim, 440-yard swim, under water swim, putting for distance, and diving. Gold, silver, and bronze medals also will be awarded for each of these events.

The grounds of the Zoo will be thrown open for a free-for-all picnic, as well as Rock Creek Park, while the Marine Band will give a long concert, beginning at 1 o'clock, at the Zoo flag staff. The District Guard bands will play at Pierce Mill and the Fifth Cavalry Band at the tournament grounds near the Avenue of the Presidents' reservoir. There will be patriotic addresses by prominent men at each place and the Declaration of Independence will be read by high school boys selected on merit for the task. They are W. I. Cleveland, McInley, Manual Training School; Joseph C. McGarraghy, Business High School; and Elmer Kayser, Western High School.

In the evening at 8 o'clock, there will be a concert on the Monument grounds by the Engineer Band, followed by a moving picture display, where the words of patriotic songs will be thrown on the screen for the audience to sing, hymns, and a grand conclusion of fireworks.

All those who desire to contribute to the fund may send offerings to E. S. Wolfe, District building, or to the District National Bank.

"BIG TIM" EULOGIZED ON FLOOR OF HOUSE

Prominent New Yorkers and Members of Tammany Hall Pack Galleries.

(Continued from First Page.) candidates for a free academy. But Tim could not go to an academy. There were mouths to feed at home.

At the age of eighteen he had a chance to buy, almost on his own terms, a saloon. He bought it and prospered. Afterward he owned many saloons, but he sold out his last one in 1892. He got his first real start in politics when he was nominated for the New York assembly by men who called him "Dan Sullivan's boy" who doesn't drink and doesn't smoke." At first Sullivan was with the county Democracy, but he became a convert to Tammany, and began building up the wonderful political machine which was his during life.

"Big Tim" served several terms in the New York State senate, and was elected in 1902 to the Fifty-eighth Congress. He was re-elected in 1904 and 1906, and was returned to Congress for the present session, but illness prevented his taking his seat.

Bathing Beach Open, But the Men Are Timid

The Municipal Bathing Beach was open for men today, but there was no great rush on the part of Washingtonians for a plunge this morning. The men seemed to lack the enthusiasm that impelled hundreds of youngsters to brave a breeze yesterday and take a dip.

The pools were opened for the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and they will remain open until 8. Men only are allowed in the pools on Sunday. They are open to boys each weekday.

DEMOCRATS REVOLT ON SUMMER SESSION

President's Attention Will Be Directed to Deadlock on Sundry Civil Bill.

President Wilson's attention will be directed by party leaders to an incident in the House yesterday that demonstrates in a striking manner the difficulty bound to be met in the effort of the Administration to keep Congress in session this summer.

For nearly three hours the leaders reported to every known expedient to summon to the House a sufficient number of members to do business. The sundry civil bill was under consideration. The Democratic leaders were anxious to hold a night session so that the measure might be rushed to the Senate early this week.

This bill, the biggest of the supply measures, carries appropriations for various public works and for every department of the Government. It is highly important that the bill become a law by July 2.

Debate was running along smoothly until about 5:30, when the Republican leader, Mr. Mann, asked how long the Democratic leaders planned to remain in session for the day.

"It's Saturday night, the members have been working all week and I think we ought to quit about now," suggested Mr. Mann.

Congressman Fitzgerald of New York, who was in charge of the bill, replied that he had hoped to hold a night session. Mr. Mann dissented and Mr. Fitzgerald persisted. Mr. Mann then made the point of "no quorum."

The House was at once deadlocked and the time from 5:30 to 8 o'clock was devoted to roll calls in an effort to get a quorum. At 8 o'clock the Speaker announced that only 128 members had answered to their names, whereas it took 218 to make a quorum. The House soon after adjourned.
